“People don’t have a propensity for laziness; people have a propensity for hard work. It just needs to be work that matters to them.” - Jane McGonigal

“Writing should be meaningful for children... an intrinsic need should be aroused in them. [It] should be incorporated into a task that is necessary and relevant for life. Only then can we be certain that it will develop not as a matter of hand and finger habits but as a really new and complex form of speech... Children should be taught written language, not just the writing of letters.”

– Lev Vygotsky
